To whom it may concern

I have been for a trip to see the River Tyne. I was very impressed by how clean it was after I had found out it was once one of the dirtiest rivers in the UK.

I have been looked at water pollution as part of a school project. Water pollution is caused by a variety of things. One of these is factories. They have been built too close to the water and their chemicals are killing the organisms within the water.

I found out that water pollution kills more people each year than war. I would like this to be improved by reducing the amount of plastic on our food items and think there should be fines for people who pollute our rivers.

Yours Sincerely

Mrs Bishop
